WITH GORGEOUS CEREMONIES AT ITS DEDICATION.

Russian Ambassador, the Mayor, an Episcopal Bishop and Guesta From All Parts of the Country There in Honor of the Russian Bishop and His Charge.

The most impressive rites of the Russian Church were employed yesterday morning in the dedication of the new Orthodox Church of St. Nicholas in East Ninety-seventh street, between Madison and Fifth avenues. Nearly all of the Russian priests in this country were present in gorgeous vestments, swelling the pomp and grandeur of the ceremonies. These occupied more than three hours.

The new building, which cost $140,000. is of distinct Russian architecture and made a fitting scene for the elaborate ceremonies. The rich costumes of the clergy were set off by the brilliant military attire of the Russian Ambassador and his staff and the several other representatives of the Czar's

The church was dedicated by Bishop Tikhon of California, the head of the Russian Church in America, who will spend much of his time in New York since his church has found so fine a home here. The Bishop was assisted by the rector of the church, the Rev. Alexander Hotovitsky; the assistant rector, the Rev. Elias Zatikoff; Archimandrite Anatole, president of the Missionary College of Minneapolis; Archimandrite Raphael, rector of the Syro-Arabian Church of New York; Archpriest Alexis Toth of Wilkes-Barre; the Rev. John Vedzelnitzay of Allegheny, Pa., and these priests: The Revs. M. Turkwitch of Bridgeport, Conn.; Ptolemy Timchenkoff of Ansonia, Conn.; John Kochruoff of Chicago; Alexander Vemolofsky of Philadelphia; Elias Klopotovsky of Old Forge, Pa.; W. Kalness of Buffalo; John Kagnowbze of Cleveland, Ohio; Tikhon Rotosvki of Troy; Anthony Dovoschuk of Passaic, N. J., and Theodore Buketoff of Shepton, Pa.

Count Cassini, the Russian Ambassador, was present with the Countess Cassini and Miss Desplanques, the flancée of Ambassador Payloff to Corea. His whole staff from Washington came with him. The Russian Consul-General, Nicholas Ladygensky: Baron Schlippenbach, Consul at Chicago, and N. Struve, the Consul-General

Chicago, and N. Struve, the Consul-General to Canada, were also present.

Bishop Grafton of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of Fond du Lac wore his vestments and participated in the ceremonies out of compliment to Bishop Tikhon, who not long ago attended the consecration of the Protestant Episcopal Coadjutor Bishop at Fond du Lac. Dr. Huntington of Grace Church and other New York clergymen were in the church.

OLDEST CATHOLIC PARISH. St. Peter's in Barclay Street Celebrates Its 116th Anniversary.

Old St. Peter's Roman Catholic Church in Barclay street celebrated the 116th anniversary of the founding of the parish yesterday. In addition to the regular ser vices there was a solemn high mass at which the preacher was the Rev. William O'Brien Pardow of the Jesuits, who is well known as a lecturer. The church was well known as a lecturer. The church was filled with old parishioners, many of whom came from a great distance.

In his sermon Father Pardow referred to the fact that the parish is the oldest of the Roman Catholic faith in New York and also to the strides that Catholicism has made since the parish was started in 1776. From being the smallest religious denomination in the city at that time it had grown, he said, to be the largest in point of numbers both in adherents and had grown, he said, to be the largest if point of numbers both in adherents and churches. He urged the congregation to keep up their interest in the parish even if it had been left far behind in the march of city's progress northward. ather James McGean, who has been rector of the parish for twenty-one years was the celebrant at the mass. He was assisted by Fathers Brosnan and Noonan.

VALUE OF LIFE'S HARDSHIPS. They Are the Real Character Builders Says the Rev. Dr. Mottet.

The Rev. Dr. Henry Mottet, rector of the Church of the Holy Communion, preached yesterday morning, emphasizing the ethical value of the trials of existence in developing haracter. He said in part:

"Some here may ask: Why must man endure hardship to attain high character? We are not in this world to find ease and fortune, or to enjoy freedom from toll and pain. We are here to build a character and to make that character a power for verlasting good in and among our fel-

CALL TO RELIGIOUS TEACHERS. New National Organization to Be Forme

at a Convention in Chicago. The Council of Seventy, which is the body of Biblical teachers that directs the American Institute of Sacred Literature has called a convention to meet in Chicago in February or March, 1903. The purpose of this convention will be the formation of an organization to improve the character and methods of the religious and moral instruction which is imparted through Sunday schools, libraries, the press and other agencies. The determination to form such an as sociation is the result of a feeling widely expressed among persons interested in the religious and ethical training of young Americans that the means at present in use for this purpose are inadequate, that the subject does not receive the attention which it merits and that the various organizations engaged in this kind of work ought to be brought into closer cooperation. The question of acceptable religious training in secular day schools, these persons believe, should also receive broad and practical consideration.

The call is signed by a list of prominent representatives of religious and secular education, Sunday school work, the press, the pulpit and the lay field. These signatures number 417 and many of them are accompanied by strong supplementary statements of personal views upon the subject. eligious and ethical training of young

JAMES HOBART MOORE OF CHI-CAGO HEADS THE LIST.

Total Gate Receipts for the Week $158,000 and the Association Clears Up a Nice Profit-General Satisfaction With the Work of the Judges-Very Few Klekers.

The Horse Show ended late on Saturday night and as soon as the judges finished their tasks the grooms carefully blanketed their charges and led them from the Garden to other stables. Yesterday many of the horses that are owned out of town were put on the cars to be shipped home. The show was successful from all points of view. There was general satisfaction with the work of the judges. There are always some who will find fault, but this year there were fewer of these than usual. The quality of the horses exhibited was way above that of former years and the attendance was so large that he association cleared a very nice profit. James Hobart Moore of Chicago was the biggest winner of prizes. He entered his horses liberally and won ten firsts, including two championships, two seconds and four thirds, a total of $2,590. Mr. Moore's horses were entered in the harness and coaching classes and he won almost everything. Dr. John L. Wentz won six first prizes. His high stepper, Lord Brilliant, got the biggest share of his prizes. This horse is getting on in years, but if he can be kept fit for an-other year he should win the Waldorf-Astoria cup for Dr. Wentz for the third time and it will then become his property. Eben D. Jordan was the biggest winner in the hackney classes and E. S. Stotesbury in the roadster classes, taking, in addition to the regular prizes, two championships. William H.

ACTIVITY AT HERRESHOFF SHOPS THANKSGIVING WEEK'S GOLF.

New Wrinkle in Keel Mould-Larger Than Constitution's or Columbia's.

BRISTOL, Nov. 23 .- The Herreshoff shops the past week were the scenes of activity and bustle that have not been in evidence there since the work of constructing the Constitution was in progress. The keel mould for the new defender was nearly fin-ished the first of the week, and before the week had closed many old-time employees opened their eyes wide at the large amount of work accomplished. As soon as C. Oliver Iselin arrived everything about the shops took a strenuous turn. The most important job done the first of the week was the completion of the wooden mould. This work out of the way, the arranging of a bed for the mould of the wooden mould. This work out of the way, the arranging of a bed for the mould to rest upon followed, and such a job has to be done with a great deal of care. To insure a perfectly solid foundation for the moulding of such a vast quantity of lead, a cargo for a vessel of respectable size, many tons of clay were spread over the shop floor, layer after layer, with each one solidly tamped down into a hard mass. After the surface was shaped to the required pitch to hold the mould, the latter was set with a level surface of insure the distribution of the melted lead as required.

Concerning the appearance of the keel mould it is ascertained that there is a new wrinkle in it. The mould is longer than two feet. In some respects this is not wondered at, from the knowledge that the new craft is to be longer over all than former Cup candidates. Various departments in the Herreshoff shoos are occupied at the present time with furnishings that will be in the new sloop. The blacksmith shops where the frames will receive their original bending are cleared for the nickel steel angle bars. Capt. Barr has not been here as yet, and from what is learned from a good source will not be until the year has ended, the fact being that Barr is engaged by August Belmont for the present year. He may visit here in the latter part of January, or soon after he engages a crew for the boat, of which he is to be skipper. Little is seen of Designer Herreshoff about the shops, as the greater part of the time he has work in the model room that engages his attention. He has able lieutenants to carry on the necessary pre-liminaries for the important job of beginning construction.
